How To Break Through Now

"But I can't escape this prison; I can't; I can't; I can't!"
"I'm too old; I'm too young. I lack education; I lack a specialty.
I don't know anyone influential. It's too early for me. It's too late for me..."

"Think you can, think you can't, either way you're right!"
So said Henry Ford. When he wanted a V-8 engine, decades ago, his engineers said it couldn't be done. He looked directly in their eyes and said, "Do it!" And they did.

His ragtag army huddled in the bitter cold of Valley Forge, with only rags to wrap around their frozen feet. General George Washington assured them they'd survive and prevail over the superbly equipped Red Coats of King George III. And they did.

David went to the river. He returned with only his slingshot and five smooth stones. He confronted the towering Goliath. Even his own people knew the hopelessness of his intention. And he prevailed.

Every great achievement since the dawn of history started as an impossible dream. Every great achiever, with fire in his or her belly, tackled the insurmountable and did the "impossible."

You choose to be an expert who speaks. Or you're a speaker who wants to be a master. Why not! Who are you to deny the world your gifts? Who are you to not reveal your greatness? Who are you to not spring ahead?

Who are you to not break through your perceived limitations? Who are you to not be a source of light and hope? Who are you to huddle in the dustbin of your true potential lamenting your fate?

"But how, how do I do it; how do I break through? How do I spring ahead? How do I crack the code? How do I get into the game?"

You declare yourself implacable. You resolve to enter the pantheon of champions. You take these actions:

1. You surrender to your purpose.
2. You find a way to make yourself one-of-a-kind.

3. You make yourself the master of your specialty.
4. You position yourself uniquely.
5. You become your message.
6. You make yourself a model of the possible.
7. You get yourself a mentor, someone who has been there and done that.
