

Old Insight - New Spin: Money Talks, Women Listen

By Barry Goss

Old Insight - New Spin: Money Talks, Women Listen

Barry Goss
Barry@SpirtualMarketing.com

Spiritual Marketing <http://SpirtualMarketing.com>

So, okay ... that subject line was me being a little squirley.

I figured it would either make you smile (if you're a man :-)) or smirk (if you're a woman).

Either way, I couldn't help but give you some quick thoughts about watching "Joe Millionaire" -- or "Sasquache" as a friend and I used to affectionately call him.

[Letter continues after this CYA-type Message]:

=====
Make Sure You Know Why You're Receiving This email:

You - or somebody pretending to be you - signed up as a subscriber at: UnspokenSecrets.com or SpirtualMarketing.com or ReferralWealth.net

This newsletter is 100% opt-in. If you know why you're here ... great. If you don't and/or don't want to receive cutting-edge marketing, wealth-building, and human-potential material, just click the link at the very, very bottom. Thanks for your patronage

=====

[Letter continued]

Yes, the now famous actor playing "Joe Millionaire" on TV station FOX is somebody a friend and I used to hang out with at "the block" (a stretch of oceanfront bars in Virginia Beach) about 6 years ago.

Evan, being the generous doorman he was, would either "hook us up" as a V.I.P (whatever that meant at the time :-)) or just get tired of being one, leave, and tag along with us as went from bar-to-bar, club-to-club, raising hell in Virginia Beach.

While, I never got a chance to keep track of Evan or stay in touch (since he left for bigger pastures), as a single guy, I can't help but smile as I watch him attempt to fool 12 women into thinking he's something he's really not (worth a cool $50 Million).

Uhm, is FOX going to finally prove that the only bulge in our pants women have been eyeballing is our wallets? ... or ... let women off the hook and show the world that the majority are, like we've been led to believe, just plain intuitive, left-brained, emotionally fragile creatures who can fall in love at the flex of a pec or the first innermost, expressive thought he shares? :-)

Well, we will see....stay tuned to FOX, Monday nights at 9PM.

I remember my Uncle Verl telling me - while getting another righteous "life lesson" over a game of billiards at our apartment recreation room: "Barry, just remember, more money just makes you more of what you already are."

Uhm, depressing, but amazingly Zen-like I thought as I heard that as a 14-year old pimple-faced teenager.

Why, I pondered in wonderment, couldn't he of said, "Barry, just remember, desiring to be more of what you already are will bring you more money."

Of course, at that age, I didn't associate the root of his "belief" with examples of instant lottery winners blowing their money overnight or spoiled kid actors growing into spoiled grownup actors.

But, either way - whether you believe instant money makes somebody "more of what he already is" or whether a person can manifest it by being/acting "more of what he already is" - none of this Zen-like insight applies to Evan Marriott.

Why ?

Evan, Joe Millionaire, is a genuine, down-home, "what-you-see-is-what-you'll-get" kinda no-sense, blue-collar, All-American dude !

If he really had boatloads of greenbacks totaling $50 Million ...well, he'd just be more of this.

But, since FOX has helped him put an "oh by the way," let-down type twist on the ole' "fake it till ya make it" ploy (he has to confess to the one lady who wins his heart that he only makes $19k a year), even the latter can't apply here, can it ?

Nah ... however, what if it could ?

If Evan really wanted to live a millionaire lifestyle by being one, could he do it just by "tricking his mind" versus tricking 12 women ?

In other words, if everything really does come from the inside-first (as explained at my site: spiritualmarketing.com), how would Evan go about being a real multi-millionaire ?

Well, I wouldn't let cha down by leaving you hanging without introducing you to a REAL multi-millionaire who gave another somebody I know the answer.

=====

Resource: Read this incredible article by Jo Han Mok. It will take you into the world of a REAL $25 Million Dollar earner who admits that his wealth would of never come along without the Mind-Power manuscript. You'll learn all about it, once you read the story.

Here's where to click to get the juicy details:

<http://spirtualmarketing.com/wow.html>

=====

Live a Life without Limits (Freedom),

Barry Goss

Virginia Beach, VA

www.spirtualmarketing.com

757-573-7823

P.S. Find out why Jo Han thought this multi-millionaire was giving him a big line of Bullshit by going here:

<http://spirtualmarketing.com/wow.html>

Get-Articles.com : 1000's of reprintable business and internet marketing-related articles.

Submit your article for reprint.