You Are Doomed If No One Knows Your Web Site Exists!

If you have a web site do you have enough visitors coming daily? Are you making enough sales, or subscribers maybe? Are you advertising enough? Do you get lots of traffic from the search engines? If the answer is no there could be a number of reasons.

1. You do advertise but not where you should
2. Your ads are not good enough, and no one notices them.
3. You are not well placed in the major search engines, if placed at all.

A few months ago I reminded my self that if the net is changing so fast, I'd better be changing with it. No market recession was going to stop me. If you own a business you have to promote it. No business can stay alive if it is not advertised. But successful advertising is not easy, and also not affordable.

Most entrepreneurs do not write good ads. The copy writers are expensive. Ads in e-zines with hundreds of thousands of subscribers are not worthwhile if your product or service is cheap. The idea came to open new sites promoting advertisements. Advertisements with the abilities to produce huge amounts of traffic. But staying reasonably priced, cheap is the word.

Guess what. My first web site promoting huge amounts of traffic is ready. You might ask yourself why do I need amounts of visitors to my site. The answer is simple. The more people see your site, the more know you exist. If your site sells a product or service that is good, or interesting, and your site is catching the attention of people visiting it, you are in!

You can make it without writing great ads. Without being highly placed in Yahoo, or Alta Vista, or Googles, or MSN. Make your site eye-catching and interesting for the visitors, make them a good offer, and if whatever you sale is good, you'll be selling lot's of it in no time.

Get the visitors e-mail addresses. Offer something free, e-zine subscription, and ask to be recommended to their friends. Do whatever it takes to keep their attention. And stay with your word. Don't sell garbage. If not, whatever visitor you will be getting, you will not make sales. And you will be loosing time and money if you stay on the net without being seen or noticed.

You will have to realize that advertising your business is what will keep it alive. If you stop promoting no one will ever come to see what you have to say or sell. Stop running the rat race though. If it did not worked out until now it does not mean it never will. Give yourself and your business a chance. Advertise!
